Members of the Berkeley City Council received a briefing from the City’s Health Officer, Lisa B. Hernandez, and the City’s Director of Health Services, Elsa Jimenez, on the status of the COVID-19 pandemic and the related health measures in place. The briefing included a review of the City’s response to the pandemic, including the implementation of public health guidelines and the provision of essential services to the community.

The City of Berkeley has taken a comprehensive approach to managing the COVID-19 pandemic, with a focus on protecting the health and safety of all residents. The City has implemented a range of public health measures to reduce the spread of the virus, including mandatory mask wearing, social distancing, and restrictions on large gatherings.

The City has also taken steps to support its most vulnerable residents, including those with underlying health conditions, those living in congregate settings, and those who are homeless. The City has provided additional support for these groups, including increased access to testing, vaccination, and medical care.

Moving forward, the City will continue to monitor the COVID-19 pandemic closely and adjust its response as needed. The City will also continue to work closely with local health care providers and the State of California to ensure that the City is well-prepared to respond to any new developments in the pandemic.
