Most workers are eligible for some paid sick time or paid time off to take care of yourself if you are ill, or need to care for sick family members, or dependent children. Many gig workers are also covered and immigration status usually doesn’t matter.

Additional Resources

FOR TENANTS

No documentation is required of a tenant or homeowner to stop an eviction proceeding. However, if you provide documentation that you have a COVID-related impact, your eviction protection is absolute and there are no exceptions. If you do not provide documentation, there are three exceptions to the eviction ordinance:

1. It is necessary to comply with a government order (for example, if your unit is “red-tagged”).
2. Your landlord takes your unit off the market (Ellis Act).
3. There is an imminent health or safety concern (e.g., black mold), not including suspected exposure to COVID-19.

FOR PROPERTY OWNERS

Homeowners impacted by COVID-19 may be eligible for temporary relief if your loan is owned or guaranteed by a federal agency including Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, the Federal Housing Administration. You may be eligible to reduce or delay payments for up to 12 months with a forbearance agreement. Your payments might be temporarily suspended, not forgiven.

Contact HERA counselors at 510-271-8443 to assist you.

FOR LANDLORDS

While landlords in Alameda County are prohibited from evicting tenants impacted by COVID-19, if tenant's inability to pay rent has created a financial hardship, there are programs for property owners. For assistance with your lender and inquiries about your options contact HERA at 510-271-8443. For additional support contact Centro Legal De La Raza at 510-437-1554.

ALAMEDA COUNTY COVID-19 EVICTION MORATORIUM

On March 31, 2020, the temporary moratorium was expanded to include all evictions throughout Alameda County. No documentation is required of a tenant or homeowner to stop an eviction proceeding. However, if you provide documentation that you have a COVID-related impact, your eviction protection is absolute and there are no exceptions. If you do not provide documentation, there are three exceptions to the eviction ordinance:

1. It is necessary to comply with a government order (for example, if your unit is “red-tagged”).
2. Your landlord takes your unit off the market (Ellis Act).
3. There is an imminent health or safety concern (e.g., black mold), not including suspected exposure to COVID-19.
